PREFACE.

THE following pages contain the first printed Catalogue of the Manuscripts and Books of the Cathedral Library of Salisbury.

The MSS. are bound up in 187 volumes. That part of the Catalogue which embraces them was prepared by Mr. Maunde Thompson, whose official position at the British Museum is a guarantee of its approximate accuracy. With the exception of a splendidly illuminated Breviary, bequeathed by Bishop Denison, the MSS. have all been in the possession of the Dean and Chapter not less than 400 years; and they range in date, according to Mr. Thompson's judgment, from the ninth to the fifteenth century. Those which may be specially mentioned, are:—

No. 150. The Psalter in Latin, with Anglo-Saxon glosses. Cent. x.–xi.

No. 180. Another Latin Psalter in two versions, Gallican and Hebrew. Cent. x.

No. 153. A handsomely written Lectionary, bearing the date of 1277.

No. 148. The Processional of the Church of Sarum. Cent. xv.

No. 175. The unique Tonale secundum usum Sarum. Cent. xiv.

No. 152. The handsome Breviary already referred to. Cent. xv.

No. 39. The Gospel of Nicodemus, in English. Cent. xv.

No. 113. Boethius, De Consolatione Philosophiæ, translated by Chaucer. Cent. xv.

No. 121. The Historia Regum Britanniæ of Geoffrey of Monmouth. Cent. xii.

No. 80. The Historia Miscella and De gestis Longobardorum of Paul Warnefrid, with other chronicles. Cent. xii.–xiii.

It is recorded in the chapter registers that schools and a library were built above one side of the cloisters in the year 1445, during the episcopate and with the pecuniary assistance of Bishop William Ayscough. No trace of the schools remains, and the library now extends only half the length of one side of the cloisters. Godwin, in his De Præsulibus Angliæ, refers to an inscription in the library, attributing its erection to Bishop Jewell; and Featley in his Life of that prelate says, 'Jewell left himself a second monument . . . . the Library he built at Salisbury.' The chapter records have not furnished any facts which serve to explain the origin of the latter statement, or to reconcile it with the earlier account of the origin of the building.

The first great benefactor, who laid the foundation of a library of printed books, was Bishop Guest. His large bequest is referred to in a monumental inscription as follows: '. . . . ingentem optimorum librorum vim quantam vix una capere Bibliotheca potest, perpetuo studiosorum usui in hâc Ecclesiâ conservandam destinavit.' No detailed specification of his gift exists; but he probably bequeathed, in addition to works of an earlier date, a large portion of the foreign Reformation literature.

Among subsequent liberal contributors, Dean Baylie, Bishop Seth Ward, and Canons Drake and Walton, claim to be mentioned. Some of the volumes given by Canon Walton have his father's autograph. In the upper margin of the title-page of a volume entitled 'The Returning Backslider' (by Sibbes) there is the following couplet, (which has been attributed to Doddridge,) apparently in Izaak Walton's handwriting, and with his autograph in juxtaposition—

'Of this blest man let this just praise be given,
Heaven was in him before he was in heaven.'

During the last and present century the Library has not been much augmented by bequests or donations; and, as there is no endowment fund for the purchase of books, modern theological and other literature is very scantily represented.

The general contents of the Library may be roughly stated under eleven heads, viz.:—

1. Patristic writings, chiefly old editions.
2. Church History, Collections of Councils, and Canon Law.
3. Bibles (Hebrew, Greek, and Latin), and Biblical exegetical literature.
4. Foreign Theology, Dogmatic and Moral, including the works of some of the Schoolmen.
5. Controversial Theology, Roman, Lutheran, Reformed, and Anglican.
6. English Theology, chiefly of the 16th and earlier part of the 17th century.
7. Early English History and Law.
8. Tracts, Political and Religious, mostly of the 17th century.

9. Latin and Greek Classics.

10. Early Mathematical, Astronomical, and Medical writings, and miscellaneous works on History, Philosophy, and Natural Science.

11. Publications of the Commissioners on the Public Records.

The total number of volumes is 3,866;[1] and many of those of the 16th century contain works of more than one author. About 125 volumes are printed in Black Letter. Of these, 24 are of the 15th century, and the majority of the rest are of the 16th century. Subjoined is a list of some of the early printed books:—

[1] Augmented, whilst the Catalogue was being printed, by 1009 volumes—the munificent bequest of Dean Hamilton.

in order to facilitate reference, has grouped together the several volumes on certain subjects; e.g. under the headings of Biblia, Testamentum Novum, Canones, Concilia, Jus, and Lexicon, he has arranged all the editions of the Bible and the New Testament, the Collections of Canons, Councils, and Canon and Civil Law, and the various Dictionaries and Lexicons, which are in the Library. By an after-thought a Subject-Index was added, which renders this part of the Catalogue less necessary, although it may still be useful.

The names of the authors of books and pamphlets which were published anonymously have been, in most cases, given in brackets.

The press-marks appended to each work indicate the several presses in the Library, and the numbers of shelves and of the volumes on the shelves.

Psalter, of the Gallican Version; preceded by a calendar and tables of epacts, festivals, etc.; and followed by the Psalm 'Pusillus eram' (f. 138), the Canticles (f. 138 b.), 'Te Deum' (f. 147 b.), 'Gloria in excelsis' (f. 148 b.), Lord's Prayer (f. 149), Apostles' Creed (f. 149), 'Hymnus Athanasii de fide Trinitatis' (f. 149 b.), and Litany (f. 152). Some alterations are made in the Athanasian Creed in a hand of the xii cent. The Litany is a later addition of the xii cent., to replace the original one which is lost. The commencement of the latter occupied the lower half of f. 151 b., but has been erased. At the end are added (f. 159 b.) some passages from the book of Job; xii and xiii centt. An interlinear gloss in English is added by the first hand to the Athanasian Creed; and by a hand of the early part of the xi cent. to the Psalter, etc. The first leaf of the Psalms is wanting, and leaves have also been cut out after ff. 54, 95, 107, 125, doubtless for the sake of the ornamental designs. Some of the initial letters are also cut out. The Calendar is ornamented with outline initials and the signs of the Zodiac drawn in red outline. The Psalter and Canticles have large initial letters executed with some skill, and chiefly formed of dragons and sometimes of birds: the human figure more rarely introduced. The prevailing colour is a dusky red. The smaller initials of the verses are filled with patches of red, green, and yellow. An ornamental design heads Psalm cxx. (f. 122), and contains the first words: 'Ad dominum cum tribularer,' etc. It is in the form of an arch supported on pillars, with an ornamental pedestal; the figure of Christ being introduced in the upper part. The execution is rude; and the colouring principally red, in harmony with the initials. The table of indictions, etc., (f. 1 b.) is arranged for the years 969–1006. The MS. may therefore be assigned to the beginning of this period. The Deposition of St. Elphege, Archbishop of Canterbury, ob. 1012, is added in large letters in the Calendar, 19th April.

Is me (librum) cum gradali ecclesie dedit ut annuatim celebretur suum anniversarium perpetuo.' 'Dedicatio ecclesiæ de Arlingham' is also added under 5 id. Oct. Obits also are found: 'xj kl. Feb. Obitus Margeriæ Bowne A.D. 1519.' 'ix kl. Feb. Obitus Rab. Bowne, A.D. 1508.' The MS. is handsomely written and is ornamented with initials and borders in gold and colours. On a band in one of the borders (f. 203) is written the name of 'Sir Walter Longney' the Vicar of Arlingham; and on a similar band (f. 215) is 'Orate pro animabus Walteri Ketteforte et Johanne uxoris ejus.' Two collections of Homilies, viz.:—

1. De tempore; from Easter to the Sunday after Ascension. The first eleven supplied by a later hand: the twelfth and part of the next missing. f. 1.
2. On the Lessons; numbered to 74, with others added. Beginning imperfectly in the second; and also imperfect at the end. f. 28.

No. 180.

Vellum; 15¼ × 12¾ inches. 173 ff. in double col. France, x cent.

Psalterium; a double version, the Gallican and Hebrew of Jerome's translation, written in parallel columns; preceded by the preface of Hieronymus, epistles of Damasus and Hieronymus, and other introductory matter (ff. 1–17); and followed by the psalm 'Pusillus' (f. 164), Canticles (f. 164 b), 'Ymnus ad matutinum diebus Dominicis,' the Te Deum (f. 168 b), 'Ymnus in diebus festis ad missam,' Gloria in excelsis (f. 169), Lord's Prayer and Apostles' Creed (f. 169 b), 'Fides Catholica' or Athanasian Creed (f. 169 b), Litany and Prayers (f. 170 b). The Psalter begins imperfectly in Ps. ii. 2. The Litany contains the names of many Breton saints.

The last leaf is an addition of the xi century. There are some marginal commentaries. Ornamental initial letters are added, with twisted designs, pendent leaves, etc. Some are in the form of fishes; and some are coloured red.

No. 181.

Vellum; 16½ × 11¼ inches. 197 ff. in double col. xv cent.

'Expositorium omnium epistolarum evangeliorumque festivalium sanctorum secundum Radulphum de Atton.' Imperfect at the beginning.

Scribe's name 'Fryth.'

No. 182.

Vellum; 16½ × 11¾ inches. 200 ff. xiii cent.

Vellum; 17¼ × 10½ inches. 338 ff. in double col. Italy, xiii cent.

Digestorum libri xxiv; with marginal commentaries.

Written in a fine Italian hand. The beginning of book iv. is wanting; and all of the initial letters, which must have been handsome, are cut. Some fragments of them remain on ff. 63, 132, 175, 281 b, etc. At the end is a note: 'Precii v marc.'

No. 184.

Vellum; 17½ × 12¾ inches. 140 ff. in double col. xii cent.
